Welcome to Knighton

As you'll discover, Knighton (or Tref-y-Clawdd to give it its Welsh name) is a small friendly town nestling in the beautiful yet gentle countryside of the Welsh Marches. It makes an excellent base for exploring the great outdoors – with superb walking in particular – and also for touring the many castles, churches, stately homes, gardens and other market towns within easy reach. It is also a surprisingly good place for shopping, with specialist shops to explore as well as those supplying everyday needs. And there are great places to eat, drink and generally unwind amid the slower pace of life in this part of the world. This guide will help you to discover the delights on offer.

History

The area has a long history, going back in the mists of time to the late Stone Age and Bronze Age. But it is the Iron Age that left its early mark, with many hill forts scattered around this part of the Border – the nearest being at Caer Caradoc (north of Knighton near Chapel Lawn) and Coxall

Knoll (west of Knighton near Bucknell). Both are linked in legend with the last stand of the Celtic Prince Caractacus against the Roman invaders. Speaking of legends, it is also said that Knucklas Castle (northwest of Knighton) was the haunt of King Arthur and Guinevere. More widely known is Offa's Dyke, built by King Offa who ruled the Saxon Kingdom of Mercia in the late 8th Century. The great linear earthwork of the Dyke runs the whole length of the border between England and Wales for some 180 miles, though it is unclear whether it was a boundary marker or had a defensive purpose. Knighton sits at the middle point of the Dyke and some of the most impressive surviving sections of Dyke run through the hills to the north and south of the town.

The Marches, as this border country is known, has a long history of trouble and conflict ranging from small raids to pitched battles: it was definitely the 'Wild West' of the Middle Ages! Evidence remains throughout the district in the form of 'mottes' – defensive earth mounds topped with a wooden palisade – introduced by the Normans. One, built by William de Braose in the 12th Century, can be seen in the town at Bryn-y-Castell (to the rear of the Community Centre and football ground) and another is located on private land at the highest point in the town above The Narrows (officially the High Street). This one later became a small stone castle and formed the administrative centre of the town under the control of the Mortimers of Wigmore, one of the great noble families of the Middle Ages. Knighton had a chequered career as a frontier town, being sacked and burnt by the Welsh a number of times, the last recorded sacking being by Owain Glyndwr at the time of his victory over an English army led by Sir Edmund Mortimer at the nearby Battle of Pilleth in June 1402.

Knighton then settled down to a quieter time as a market town and commercial centre for this part of Radnorshire. The English Civil War largely passed it by, though there was a small Royalist garrison in the town and just a few miles away there were violent sieges of Parliamentary castles at Brampton Bryan and Hopton Castle. Some sources say that King Charles I passed through Knighton in August 1645 while trying to raise fresh troops in Wales and the Marches after the disastrous Battle of Naseby.

'Knighton became the first Fairtrade town in Radnorshire, and the third in Powys in 2006. Since then nearly all of our local shops continue to stock an ever increasing range of Fairtrade goods. We have a tea tent every year at Knighton Show & Carnival where we sell Fairtrade produce, cakes and beverages and the profit made is given to local charities. We have recently staged a very successful Fairtrade fashion show and have a monthly stall at the local farmers' market. We also have stalls at local events so that Fairtrade has a continuous presence. Local schools, clubs, churches and organisations also continue to fly the flag for Fairtrade in Knighton and visitors to the town are impressed by the range of Fairtrade goods on offer'.

Dark Skies The Universe from Knighton

With half of the world's population now living in cities, many urban dwellers have never experienced the wonderment of pristinely dark skies and maybe never will. Light pollution is obscuring people's long-standing natural heritage to view stars.

From a city centre location you might see about 100 stars with your naked eyes, and the further away from the streetlights you go, the better the view becomes. Under a really dark sky you can see over 1,000 stars. You can even see our own galaxy, The Milky Way, stretching across the sky.

The UK has some of the largest areas of dark sky in Europe, and the hills around Knighton are wonderful examples of dark observing sites, with the convenience of the town nestling below in the valley. So dark are the skies around Knighton that the area was selected for the Spaceguard Centre, the only astronomical observatory in Europe to be developed specifically to study Near Earth Objects.

Why not take advantage of Knighton's 'Dark Skies' and make time for night sky observations during your stay in the town?

Walkers are Welcome

Situated as it is on two national trails, it is not surprising that Knighton is one of 60+ towns and villages with the national designation "Walkers are Welcome".

However, Knighton and the upper Teme valley are not just for long-distance footpath walkers. The Shropshire Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty may stop officially at the Radnorshire border but, of course, the stunning landscape doesn't. In fact some say it just gets better!

This traditional and unspoilt market town attracts many day walkers with its well way-marked footpaths and bridleways. There is an active Ramblers' Cymru Group who welcome visitors on their walks and publish local circular walks pamphlets. See www.powysramblers.org.uk/?page\_id=9.

We are constantly working on developing walks that will be attractive to a variety of different interest groups and, where possible, are wheelchair and buggy friendly. Look out for our History Walk and Lollypop Toddle!

Please check with our website: www.visitkington.co.uk for news of "Walkers are Welcome" events and for more information about other "Walkers are Welcome" towns and villages, visit www.walkersarewelcome.org.uk.

Lots to do...

There are plenty of other things for the visitor to do too, including wildlife watching, fishing, horse riding, motor biking and visiting heritage sites. For those who want even more excitement, there is a top rally driving school a few miles out of town near Llangunllo. The area is also rich in talented artists and crafts people and, in addition to local galleries, there are frequent exhibitions and events, including the annual 'h Art' week in mid September each year which focuses on Herefordshire but spills over the border into this part of Powys and Shropshire.

Knighton lies in the beautiful Teme Valley, cushioned by the green hills of Powys and Shropshire. The overall feeling is one of rural tranquility and a slower pace of life than you might find in other parts of the country. The wooded hills, rivers and streams, and pasture land with the occasional cornfield or two, offer marvelous opportunities for visitors to enjoy the outdoors. It is an ideal centre for walking, being located on both the Offa's Dyke Path (running north-south for 180 miles along the border) and Glyndwr's Way, which starts at Knighton and runs in a giant horseshoe across to Machynlleth and back to Welshpool, covering about 130 miles in total. The 30 mile Mortimer Trail also runs nearby at Aymestrey and Lingen. There are also, of course, plenty of shorter walks and rambles to suit everyone.

With quiet roads and lovely countryside this is also a good place for cyclists, whether your preference is for mountain biking in the forests, long distance touring or leisure cycling along country lanes. For those who like a challenge, Knighton is part of the Radnor Ring, a 86 mile scenic ride which links the town with Presteigne, Llandrindod Wells and Rhayader.

With its good value places to stay and eat, Knighton and its local area makes a great base for exploring the Marches. Apart from the many attractions closer to hand, here's a taste of what's within easy reach.

Within 20 or so minutes drive: the impressive remains of Clun Castle, beautifully set Hopton Castle, the gem that is Stokesay Castle, and the ruins of the once mighty Mortimer stronghold at Wigmore Castle.

Within 30 or so minutes drive: the delightful market towns of Ludlow and Leominster, both full of quaint old buildings, lovely churches and known for good food. Ludlow also has its massive castle remains, a setting for famous food fairs and Shakespearean plays.

Within 30 or so minutes drive: the attractive National Trust houses and grounds at Berrington Hall (think Jane Austen elegance) and Croft Castle (which has great walks and fantastic views from the Iron Age Hill Fort at Croft Ambrey).

Within 40 or so minutes drive: the stunning lakes and dams of the Elan Valley, the Royal Welsh Showground (agricultural shows, antiques fairs etc.) just outside Builth Wells, and the fascinating 'book town' of Hay on Wye, with its international Literary Festival.

Within 40 or so minutes drive: great walking on the Long Mynd and its secret valleys, the pretty town of Montgomery with its ruined castle dramatically perched above the town and, a little further on, the impressive castle and beautiful gardens of Powis Castle (National Trust).
